

Moodle Based E- Learning Environment

Presented by: Asst. Lecturer Manaf B. Raewf
Department of Banking and Financial Science
Cihan University - Erbil

Introduction

- Everywhere now, the computer is an important part of modern life for the learner.
- Teaching and learning approaches should include components of e-learning which are computer-based

Moodle integration

Moodle allows the integration of a wide range of resources:

- chats and forums to online booklets
- lecture notes: including any kind of text-based or Html formatted documents
- multimedia resources such as graphics, video or audio
- PowerPoint, or Flash-based applications

Moodle focuses on giving educators the best tools to manage and promote learning and allows teachers to organize, manage and deliver course materials

Moodle advantages

- Emphasizes the construction of knowledge through active and interactive learning
- learning multi-sensory experience through multimedia
- provide a set of tools that support an inquiry and discovery-based approach to online learning
- purports to create an environment that allows for collaborative interaction among students as a standalone or in addition to conventional classroom instruction

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying a Moodle course page. The browser's address bar shows the URL: `moodle.cihanuniversity.edu.iq/local/mass_enroll/mass_enroll.php?id=346`. The page title is "Cihan University-Erbil learning management system".

The left sidebar contains a navigation menu with the following items: BMARK, Participants, Badges, Competencies, Grades, General, Introduction of bank marketing, Topic 2, Topic 3, Topic 4, Dashboard, and Site home.

The main content area is titled "Bulk enrolments" and has two tabs: "Bulk enrolments" (active) and "Bulk unenrolments".

The "Bulk enrolments" section contains the following text:

With this option you are going to enrol a list of known users from a file with one account per line

The firstline the empty lines or unknown accounts will be skipped.

The file may contains several columns, separated by a comma, a semi-column or a tabulation.

The first one must contains a unique account identifier : idnumber (by default) login or email of the target user.

The second if present, contains the group name in wich you want that user be be added.

You may repeat this operation at will without damages, for example if you forgot the group for some users.

Below the text, there is a "File location" field with a red information icon. To its right, a tooltip displays "Choose a file..." and "Maximum size for new files: 8MB".

Below the tooltip is a dashed rectangular box containing a blue downward-pointing arrow and the text: "You can drag and drop files here to add them."

The Windows taskbar at the bottom shows the search bar with the text "Type here to search" and several application icons. The system tray on the right shows the time as 05:30 and the language as ENG.
